Methodology

FundCalibre uses its proprietary quantitative screening tool, AlphaQuest, to screen funds regarding the risk-adjusted performance. Besides, managers must have at least three years of track-record to be considered. AlphaQuest analyses the consistency of the alpha as well as its absolute level. It uses weekly data over 10 years (or the life of the fund or tenure of a manager if shorter) to calculate both the average annualised alpha and the annualised volatility of the alpha. It uses this data to generate an expected alpha range and predict the probability of positive future alpha in a statistically robust way.
